The Syrian Arab Army and 'al-Hashd al-Sha'abi', also known as the Popular Mobilisation Forces (PMF), recaptured a 100 square kilometre area (38.6 square miles) on the Syrian-Iraqi border, Tuesday.

The capture means the SAA and its allies now control the stretch between the al-Waleed and Al-Qa'im, forcing the self-proclaimed Islamic State (IS; formerly ISIL/ISIS) into a bottleneck between the Iraqi and Syrian forces.

Quds Force chief Qassem Suleimani reportedly in Albu Kamal after Syrian army, allies 'completely recapture' final ISIS stronghold

Mehrzaad Kohanrouz @MehrzaadBBC 19h19 hours ago 19 Nov 17

Published on Nov 20, 2017

Reports say the Syrian military and its allies have captured the border city of Abu Kamal, the Islamic State group's last urban stronghold in the country. A commander fighting in the area says the collapse of IS will open a new area of Shia influence across the Middle East from Iran to Lebanon. BBC Arabic's Feras Kilani has this special report from inside the city...
